0:00

Hi, I am Tiffany Strann-Peters from the Department of Youth Affairs.

0:03

And for us at the Department of Youth Affairs, digital transformation is revolutionary.

0:09

Revolutionary because it revitalizes the way we do business.

0:15

At the Department of Youth Affairs, you can now get all our applications 100% online.

0:19

You do not have to leave the comfort of your home.

0:21

You don't have to come up those steps, get an application, fill it out and bring it back.

0:25

In addition to this.

0:27

We have an illiteracy program which is 100% online, where the teachers teach from behind a computer screen.

0:34

In addition, they include apps.

0:36

And you know once you have a literate country, it's better for everybody.

0:42

In addition to that, we have the young cohort of the youth volunteer corps where we have a young IT professionals who are helping us to transform our whole way of doing business at the department of Youth Affairs.

0:56

We are now moving to have all our documents online.

1:00

And so what does that mean?

1:02

It means it's environmentally friendly.

1:05

It is eco-friendly.

1:07

It's paperless.

1:08

We're saving the trees and preserving our beloved planet Earth for future generations to come.

1:15

I am encouraging all this to get on board for digital transformation.

1:19

Digital transformation.

1:20

It's for me, its for you! Get on board.
