

Reel Transcript for Laura Hildebrandt, Digital Transformation Implementation Specialist, UNDP

0:00

My name is Laura Hildebrandt.

0:01

I am a Digital Transformation Implementation Specialist, the Chief Digital Office of UNDP.

0:07

We're here today to talk about the importance of digital transformation and the potential impact it can have as an accelerator and an enabler of the Sustainable Development Goals.

0:20

We've all seen how digital is transforming our society, maybe especially since the pandemic.

0:26

I mean, before that, everybody was online.

0:28

But when the pandemic hit, everything had to go to remote, remote work, remote school, remote government.

0:37

And that meant that we all had to adapt very quickly.

0:40

And the United Nations helped governments to adapt from start to finish, whether it was supporting the education environment, supporting businesses.

0:49

But governments themselves also need to adapt to the change.

0:54

Whether its climate disasters, economic and social disruptions, political disruptions the rate of change is quick.

0:54

And so, we're here working with governments to try to assess the risks and assess the opportunities and drive action to take advantage of the opportunities.